

ABSTRACT:

In the case of a switch for the optical switching of a light path, particularly for switching the entering of light into a fiber-optical light guide, the switch having at least one mirror surface for reflecting the light and, for establishing the mirror surface, a support being equipped with a reflective layer, the support is constructed as a glass body.